Advice for residency candidates going to the Midyear Clinical Meeting

Mingling with 20,000 other pharmacists can be an intimidating experience for residency candidates at their first ASHP Midyear Clinical Meeting (MCM). A little bit of preparation on your part will improve your MCM experience and, most importantly, help you to identify residency programs that are a good fit for you.

Approximately 450 pharmacy practice residencies will be represented by about 1000 preceptors at the Residency Showcase. The Residency Showcase is held on Monday afternoon, Tuesday morning, and Tuesday afternoon; however, each program will exhibit only once. You will be joined by about 1200 other prospective residency candidates. Clearly, you will not be able to stop at each booth. You should identify programs in advance that you want to visit. Some candidates select programs by city and state, by size, or by college of pharmacy affiliation. Teeters and Pochop offer excellent advice about how to choose a residency, and I highly recommend that you read these articles in advance of the MCM.

Your goal at the Residency Showcase is to identify programs that are a good fit for your interests. The Residency Showcase is an excellent opportunity for you to interview preceptors and current residents. Ask questions designed to narrow your choices for onsite interviews to a manageable (and affordable) size. Structure your questions to find out if a particular program matches your goals, interests, and professional values. Do not worry if a program cannot offer every one of the experiences you would like to have, as you will likely change your mind over the next 18 months. Avoid asking questions that can be answered with yes or no or with a numerical value, such as how many residents are in the program and how much staffing is required. Instead, ask residency directors why they serve in this role and what they like the most about working with residents. Ask the residents at the booths if their staffing experiences contribute to their development as practitioners. Ask the residents what they like about their relationships with their preceptors and with other pharmacists. Because of its size and the time limitations, collecting the information you need at the Residency Showcase is difficult, and I recommend that you practice ahead of time with pharmacy residents and preceptors that you meet during your clerkship experiences.

The residents’ poster sessions, usually held on one day of the MCM, are too often overlooked by residency candidates. These sessions are less crowded and the atmosphere is much more relaxed than at the Residency Showcase. After all, what residents do not want to talk to interested parties about their own work? You will have plenty of time to discuss the residents’ work and to find out about preceptor support, relationships with the medical staff, and the overall quality and scope of the residency.

You still cannot decide which programs to pursue? Search educational programming at the MCM using the names of program directors and preceptors, and view their posters and attend their presentations.

If you are not sure which aspect of health-system pharmacy interests you the most, check out the ASHP Section of Clinical Specialists and Scientists networking sessions. These are open forums where you will learn about the hot topics in a given area, and you may even enjoy the give-and-take enough to participate in a lively discussion.

Continued on page 1791

With the right preparation and attitude, you can have an outstanding MCM and return to school with enthusiasm generated during the Meeting. As a residency preceptor, I want to thank you for your commitment to pursue residency training. I am envious of all the wonderful things you will accomplish in your professional career.

Michael A. Fotis, B.S.Pharm. Director, Pharmacy Practice Residency, and Manager, Drug Information and Drug Use Policy Northwestern Memorial Hospital Feinberg L-700 Chicago, IL 60611

DOI 10.2146/ajhp050493